New GTC cards arriving during August

From The Defense Travel Management Office

New Government Travel Charge Cards issued by Citi will be distributed in a phased approach beginning in August continuing through the end of September.

The first phase of card distribution will include locations outside the continental U.S. followed by all Centrally Billed Accounts.

The next phase will be mailed to continental U.S. addresses beginning with the western states and moving eastward. Cardholders are advised to confirm their mailing addresses on file with Bank of America as new travel cards will be mailed to that address. Cards that are sent to an incorrect address will be returned to Citi. APCs will not have the option to forward the cards to new addresses. If cardholders do not receive a new travel card by Oct. 31, they are instructed to notify their APC.

New cards will have a new look and a new account number. Cardholders should verify receipt of new cards immediately.

Cardholders should not to throw away old cards as new cards are not ready for use until Nov. 30.

Chusok

Chusok, also known as Hangawi, is one of the three biggest national holidays in Korea. It is a major three-day holiday in Korea celebrated on the 15th day of the 8th month of the lunar Korean calendar. It is the Korean equivalent of the Mid-Autumn Festival, which originated in China and is also celebrated in Japan and Vietnam.

Like Thanksgiving Day in the United States, Chusok is the day when families get together, give thanks to ancestors for a bountiful harvest.

Chusok originates from Gabae, which began during the reign of the third king of the kingdom of Silla (57 BC - AD 935).

Furthermore, Chusok can be traced back to a religion related to the moon from ancient times. The sun was considered natural, but the once-in-a-month full moon that brightened the dark night was a grateful presence.

In South Korea today, the majority of Koreans returning to their hometowns to pay respects to the spirits of one's ancestors.

People perform ancestral worship rituals early in the morning.

They often visit the tombs of their immediate ancestors to trim plants and clean the area around the tomb, and offer food, drink, and crops to their ancestors.

Editor's note: This is part one of a three-part series on the Chusok holiday.

Why there is a ration control policy in Korea?

By Senior Master Sgt. Mark Heath
51st Communications Squadron first sergeant

One regulation Airmen are sometimes curious, or forget, concerns ration-controlled items.

Due to a long history of widespread black marketing, USFK has placed limits on certain duty-free goods most subject to abuse.

USFK regulation 60-1 outlines that liquor, beer and commissary purchases are rationed. All rationed items are by family size and you must be at least 21 years old to purchase alcohol.

The following limits are based on an unaccompanied person's ration: Liquor, 20 percent or more, by volume is rationed in units. For example one bottle (fifth, quart, or liter) is counted as one liquor unit. A 1.75 liter bottle of liquor is counted as two liquor units.

You may purchase up to three units per month.

For beer no more than two cases per day, not to exceed eight cases per month may be purchased.

Commissary purchases are rationed by dollar amounts.

For unaccompanied personnel, the ration amount is $550 per month.

There is a web site that allows you to review your ration purchases located at <https://pimsk.korea.army.mil/>.

This site reviews the ration limits and allows you to see what you have purchased for two months.

Keep in mind this site does not update automatically and the information posted may be two weeks old.

The best way to track your purchases is to keep your receipts.

Remember, it is your responsibility to know and abide by the ration control policy.

Timeout for safety

Safety is not a program

Commentary by Lt. Col. Jack Stokes
25th Fighter Squadron commander

So many times I hear people refer to the safety office as a program or a special department in the Air Force.

As a former squadron and wing flight safety officer, and wing Chief of Safety, I've developed a different outlook on that safety thing.

To me, it's not a special 101-day program or a focused way of flying jets, driving vehicles or even walking down the streets of Osan. It's not even a "way of life." Safety is actually a by-product of the person you are.

Every person in this world makes decisions.

Whether we like it or not, those decisions reflect the type of person we are.

Am I the kind of person who goes downtown and drinks all night or day, then chooses to get in my car, or boat, and drive off completely intoxicated?

If so, then obviously, by nature, my personality is one that doesn't care about making mature decisions.

Let's take a look at another example:

At work, I discover a shorter and, what I think, a better way of accomplishing the mission.

Will I continue to do things the way I think they should be done, or do I submit the idea forward and have it approved by the right people?

Again, my decision will reflect the type of person I am.

Mature people do things in accordance with the regulations. Immature people do things however they want, without any regard for others.

When looked at in those terms, safety isn't a program or a way of life, and it is definitely not "paramount!"

Safety is a reflection of how mature a person is.

Now, I'm not naïve enough to say that accidents never happen. Sometimes it doesn't matter what anyone does or doesn't do, bad things just happen.

However, most of the time I've noticed that a safe environment, a safe activity or a safe program, is due to mature people making mature decisions.

Returning to the examples used above, someone gets completely intoxicated and then drives off, or that same person drinks moderately then decides to have someone drive them home.

Is there a difference in the level of maturity?

Someone takes a short cut while performing maintenance on a vehicle because they are late for a family activity, or they take the time to do it the right way, possibly asking for help, and accept the fact that they will be late because they chose to not put someone else's life at risk.

Again, is there a difference in the level of maturity?

Absolutely! Believe it or not, life is not a game. Our decisions always affect us and those around us.

It takes a mature person, shop, squadron, group and wing to do things correctly and in a mature way.

In so doing, we don't have a safety program --- we have a much better working environment and a much happier life.

The poster features a collage of images: a pilot in a cockpit, a fighter jet in flight, a pilot in a helmet, and historical photos of military personnel. The background includes a stylized American flag and a Korean flag. The text is prominently displayed in the center, with logos for the 51st Fighter Wing and the ROK Air Component Command at the top corners. The date and location are at the bottom.
